

- A. This is the kitchen in Home A and Home B. Shelving is hung on two of the structural walls, allowing for ample storage. Wood trim is attached around the ceiling and window to eliminate water leakage.
- B. This is the living space and bedroom in Home A and Home B. The room is divided into three private spaces using large storage pieces. The wall where the beds are placed is covered in fabric to provide comfort and control the acoustics.
- C. This shows the first of two bedroom spaces in Homes A, B, or C. The children sleep on a bunkbed in order to maximize space. The storage dividers are used to keep this area private from where the parents sleep.

Interior of the salon in Home C. This includes shelves on the structural wall, comfortable seating, and a mosaic metal window covering.

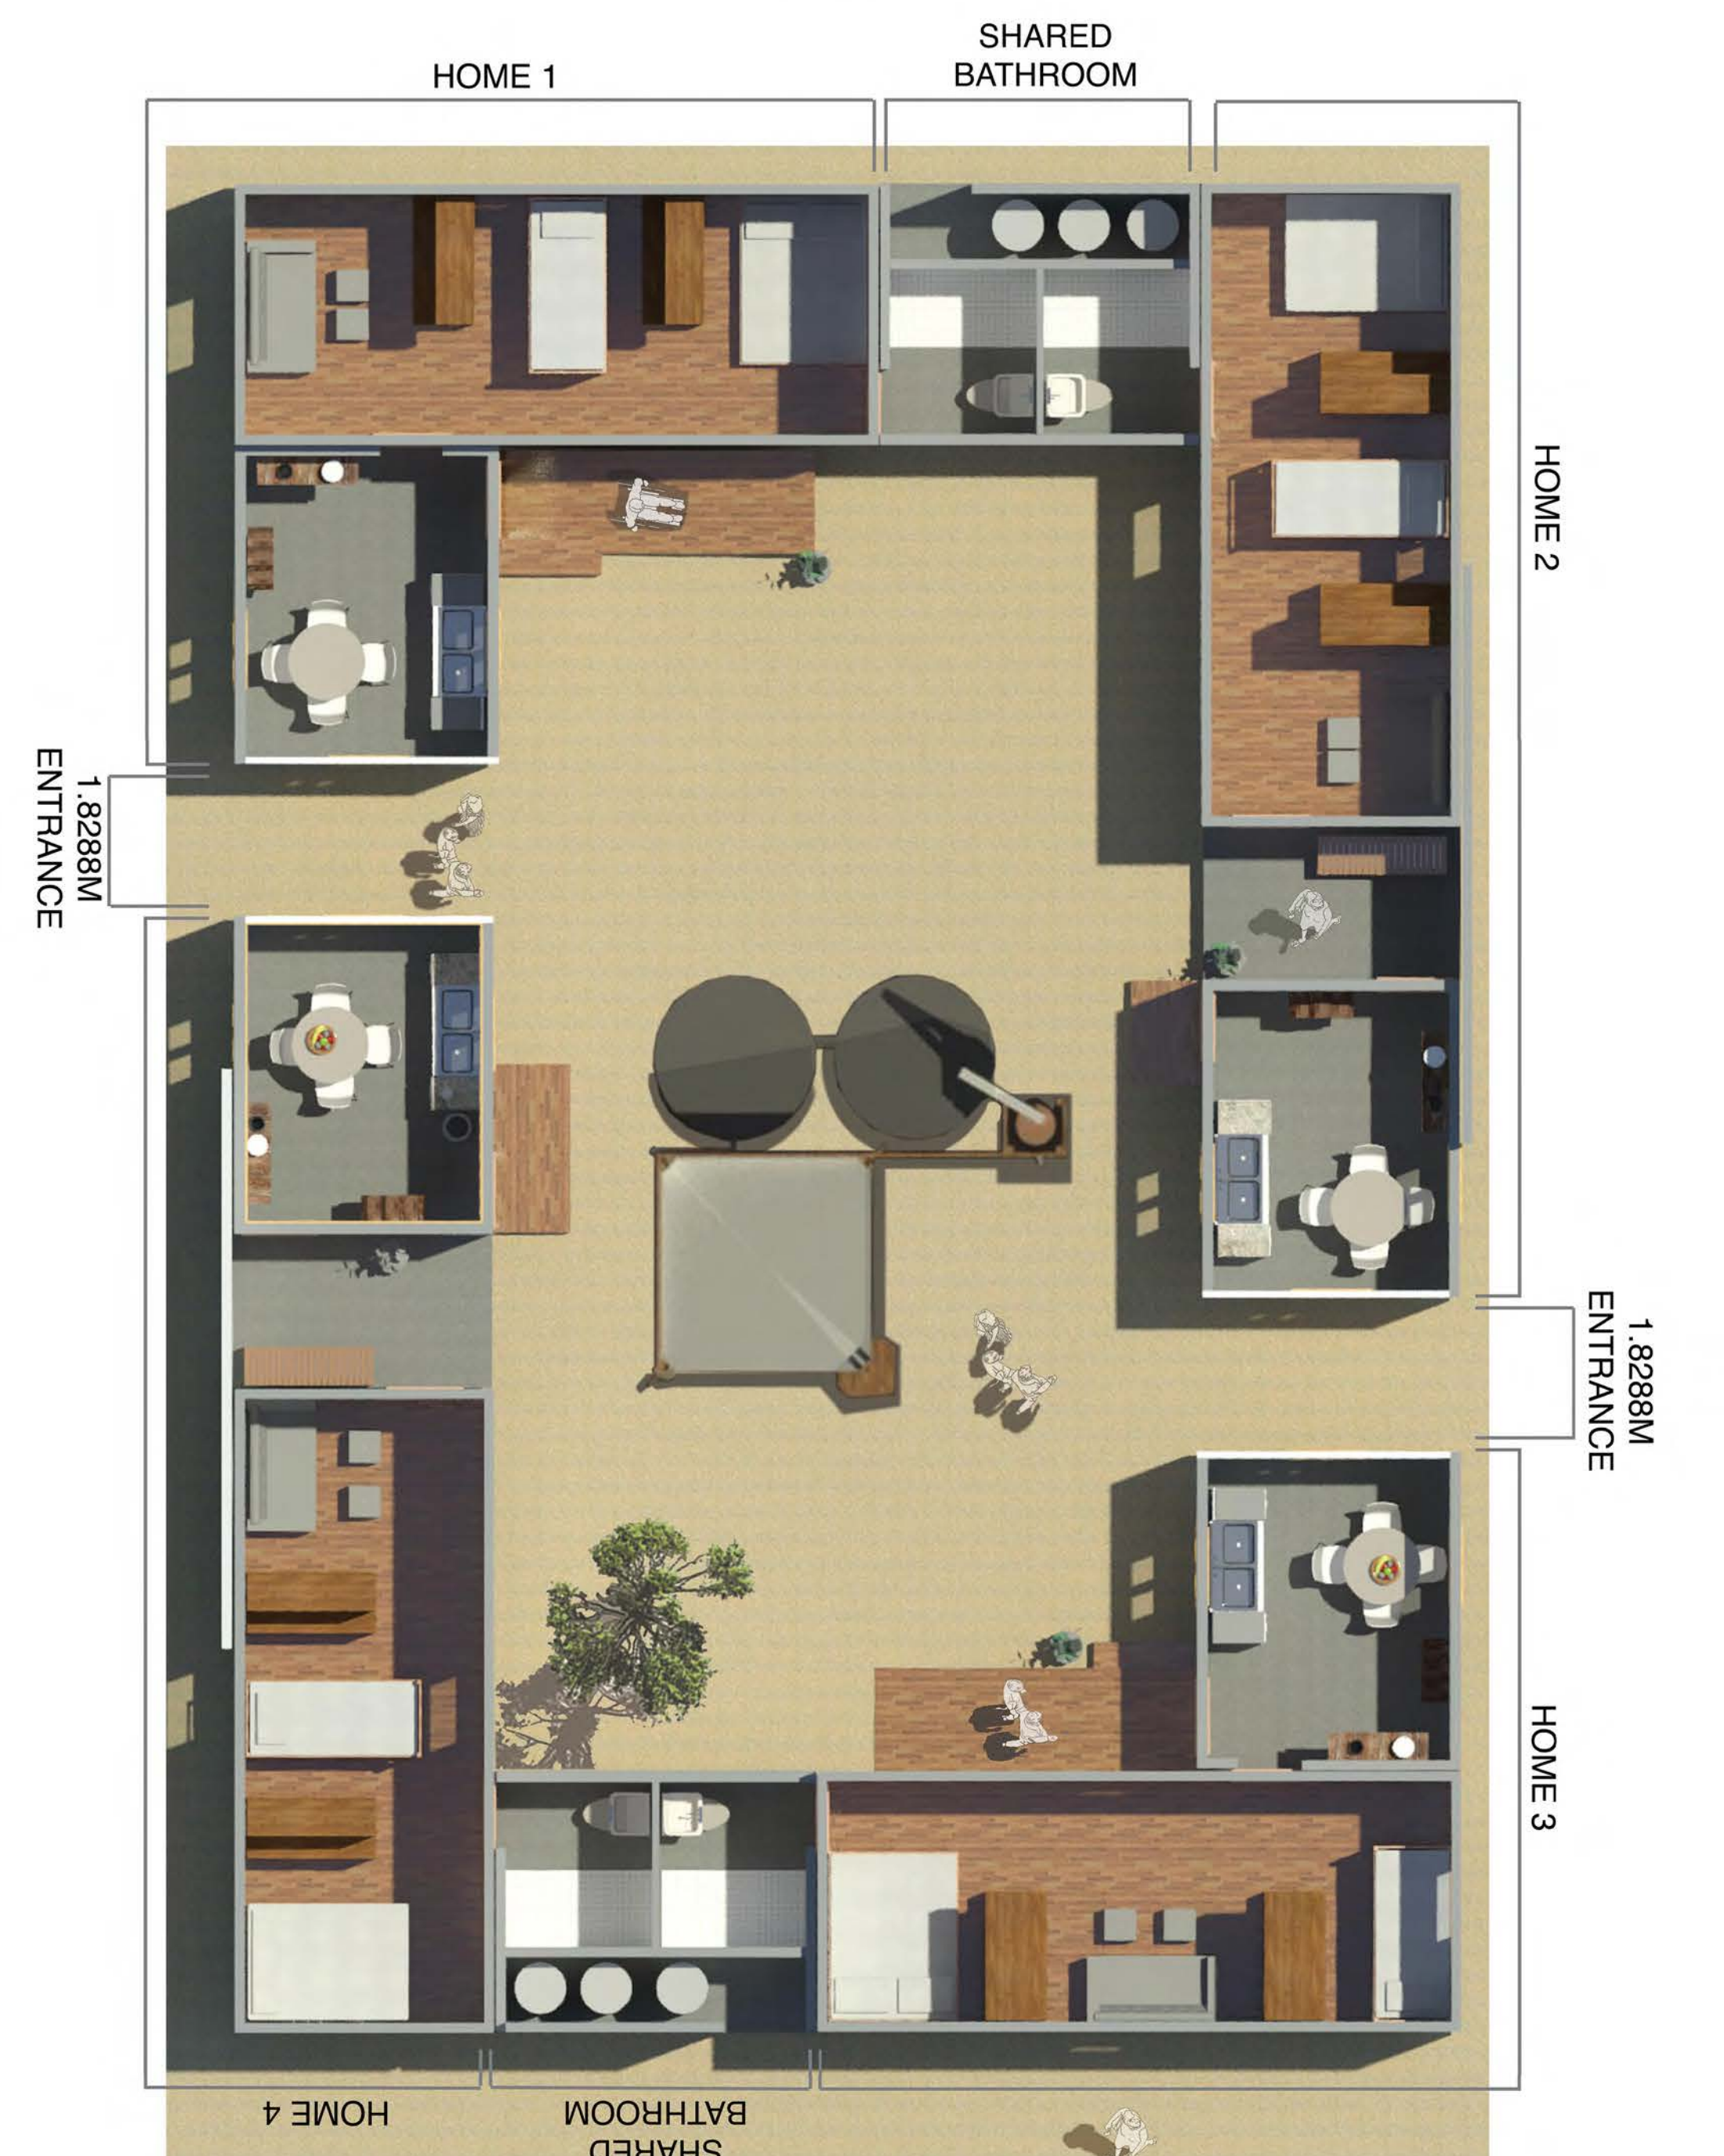

Interior of the living room and kitchen space in Home C. The room divider is used to provide privacy between the two distinct spaces as well as provide flexible storage.
