

SVA is a multidisciplinary college of art and design institute. The project deals with two contradictory issue one of which is the space requirements of students and the economic aspects of the organization. Therefore the design is highly concerned to the function and space utilization. The streets of Manhattan is always crowded and the site holds more than 50 years of memory. The new SVA academic building will serve as both dormitory and academic purpose as an addition of old campus for future students. The basement and the ground floor are designed in a way to address the public access and to draw them in to the building. Large open Plaza is dedicated to students and public movements as the continuation of old campus.
